GEO. HOLLAND WAS GRANTED A REPRIEVE.

 spite of Six Months.

Nerved Himself For
 Death and the Extension
 Came as a Surprise.

George Holland was not hanged yesterday. On Wednesday evening
 Gov. Beckham granted the respite asked for, as Holland was needed as a witness against Dick Carney and Frank Merriweather, who are to be tried next month. Attorneys for the commonwealth asked for the reprieve. The respite is for a little less than six months. He will be hanged July 7.

The old man had given up hope and the new lease of life came as a surprise and of course greatly revived his spirits, which had sunk to a very low ebb.

 survived the shock a few hours.
 The body will be interred at the

Mr. Luther B. Sullivan, of this place, was killed by the train near and was formerly with the L. & N.

 pacity of chief clerk in the office of the general freight agent. He was one of the most popular young men

The Weather.

Washington, D. C., Jan. 13. —For Kentucky — Cold wave tonight. Saturday fair and cold.

All of the new Governors are now in office and politics is a live question in many of the States.

The Russian government seems determined to continue the war until "peace with dignity" can be secured.

The Georgetown Times has come out in favor of a return to the viva voce system of voting. The question will be submitted to a vote of the people next November. The Kentuckian has always been opposed to the secret ballot on account of its fraudulent possibilities.

A dispatch from Washington to the Louisville Times says Hon. A. O. Stanley will be a candidate for Congress again next year. Mr. Stanley has made a popular and painstaking representative and has grown greatly in the estimation of his constituents, even those who opposed him most vigorously in his first race. He will be a hard man to beat.

Senator Blackburn's opponent for re-election has been decided upon. It will be Judge Toss. H. Paynter, until recently a leader of the anti-administration forces. The first contest in the re-election at was the appointment of Morgan K. Yonts, Judge Paynter's son-in-law, to one of the best offices in Louisville.

the of capital site. The fight for the site will center on a location in South Frankfort, six blocks from the present buildings. The sentiment for a change seems to be very pronounced, and it is almost sure to be made.

The advertisers are still editing the Kentuckian inside and out and as news is scarce we are giving them full way. Nearly $125,000 of merchandise is now on the bargain counters in Hopkinsville. No such chances were ever offered to the people of Christian county to buy goods cheap.

The World's Fair has $1,384,000 to the good and after all expenses are paid, it is believed a small surplus will be left.

FUN MAKERS.

Avalanche of Company and Whirlwind of Laughter.

Lots of pretty girls, sweet catchy music, a gorgeous display of gowns of the present day's latest creations, and the various stage accessories to match, a raging riot of rapid repartee and side-splitting scenes and comic sights is something like what is claimed for the new musical farce by Frank Dumont, called "Happy Holligan," to be presented at Holland's Opera House next Tuesday night, January 17. It has some of the prettiest music that has been written in a decade, and the comedy is sparkling with rapid fire wit and the hundred or more ludicrous, laughable, humorous situations that arise from that well-meaning, very obliging and extremely polite individual, "Happy Holligan," who always comes to grief.

Miss Clara Belle Hendricks, aged 15, of Henderson, who went away with O. L. Malette, a married boarder in her mother's house, Sept. 22, has returned home. She says her relations were those of father and daughter, though Malette had told her that he wanted to marry her when he secured a divorce from his wife.

MAY SUCCEED FAIRBANKS.

The Friends of Congressman Landis Are Seeking a Senatorial Toga for Him.

Delphi, Ind.—Among the possible successors to Senator Fairbanks in the United States senate is Congressman C. R. Landis, now representing the Ninth Indiana district in the lower house. Congressman Landis has a host of friends pushing his senatorial boom. This is especially true in newspaper circles.

HON. C. R. LANDIS
He May Succeed Vice President Eliot in the United States Senate.

One in which he is so well known, having been engaged in journalistic work from the time of his graduation from Wabash college, at Crawfordsville, in 1883, to the time of his election to congress in 1897. During that time he was editor of the Logansport Journal, and later of the Delphi Journal. In 1894 he was chosen president of the Indiana Republican Editorial association, and has been prominent in that organization for several years.

Congressman Landis is a native Oklaian, but has resided in his adopted state the greater part of his life. He was born at Millville, O., July 3, 1853. His present home is in this city.

A Curious Custom.
A curious custom has been celebrated at Kila, near Moscow. All the marriageable girls in the town lined up in the principal square decked out in their simple flannel, many of them also having with them the stock of linen, household and personal, which forms part of their dowry. The young men contemplated matrimony then walked down the ranks of beauty as they moved toward the church, and selected the girls of their choice. A formal visit to the parents to arrange details was then made in each case, and a date fixed for the ceremony.

Japanese Ship Names.
In view of the periodic discussion about the appropriate naming of warships, it is of interest to learn that Japan has christened her big battleships after great mountains and the small warships from some well-known natural features of the country. It may also be mentioned that at the end of the name of every Japanese ship is either the termination "hara" or "maru." "Kasuma" was vessel and is applied, of course, only to the emperor's fleet. "Maru," which means round, is applied to merchant vessels—why, it is difficult to say.

CAIRO VERY SORE

And Threatens to Get Out of The "Kitty."

The K. L. T. League officials held a meeting at Vincennes, Sunday. All of the clubs were represented and about the only business done was to settle up the back business.

The matter of admitting Princeton and Owensboro will be taken up at the next meeting, which will be held at Paducah on January 29, and at this meeting officers will be elected.

Farnbaker the former secretary who will be left out in the cold in the new deal, is trying to get Cairo to stay out of the league.

A Cairo dispatch says Cairo will not remain in with Hopkinsville, Henderson and Clarksville, but these teams have half of the votes and cannot be dropped, so if anybody drops out it is apt to be Cairo.

HE

The atmosphere of the lodging house was thick and heavy with stale tobacco smoke and drying garments, but it was warm—there was that comfort. The coils of unpaired red pipe that heated the room were even more adequate and the two shabby men who had come in that morning had dragged their chairs over by the window, where the temperature was lower. The window looked out upon a narrow street that was thronged with people carrying bulky packages, from some of which easily colored toys protruded, and wreaths of evergreen.

"Are you going to hang yer sock up ter-night?" asked one of the shabby men.

"I've got wearin' 'em," replied the other. "The medical profession reckons bandages for them as has much footwork to do—bandages and taller. Where you goin' ter feed your face ter-morrow?"

"I've got an invite," replied the other man. "It ain't no charitable graft; it's a private family—friends o' mine, as has extended the hospitality of the season. It's a regular thing an' I'm expected. I et my Christmas dinner with 'em last year."

"On the level?" asked his friend.

"Sure. It was sorter accident at I met this friend o' mine. I was walkin' along fingerin' where I could get a good handout an' a pair o' shoes the easiest an' was passin' a swell sort of home when I seen a guy settin' at de window. A pleasant sort of a lookin' guy. He seen me, too, an' he motioned with his finger. I wasn't dead sure that he meant me, but I stopped an' I seen him git up out of his chair. Nex' minit the street door opened an' he stood there. 'Well, thinks I, 'there's a drink in this sure.' So I walked up the gravel an' up the stone steps an' up to the door an' blame me if that feller didn't ketch hold o' my hand an' shake it like I was the best friend he'd got on earth."

"Come in," he said.

"I wondered what was goin' ter happen nex', but I didn't say nothin'. He takes me along a swell hall all covered with the swelldest carpet that you ever seen an' all hung up with fancy pictures, an' up a flight o' stairs what had the same soft carpet on it that your feet sunk into."

"What was it?" asked the other man.

"Private luncheon asylum?"

"Luncheon 'lyum nothin'," replied the first.

"The feller was as sensible as you or me, though that ain't sayin' so dermed much, either."

"Well, he took me into a bathroom all marble an' nickel an' fancy decorated tiles. An' there was scented soap an' towels as big as a blanket an' a table with shavin' tackle on it an' a mirror an' powder, an' hair ile an' perfume, 'I'll leave you here while I git some clean things for you," he says. "I notice your clothes is somewhat soiled by the journey." Then he goes out an' comes back with a white shirt an' collar an' cuffs an' necktie an' a suit o' clothes what was as good as noo or better. 'Now, you can refresh yourself with a bath an' shave, my dear feller,' he says."

"I done just what he told me to. I got inter that hot water an' I had the bath of my life. Then I shaved myself with a razor that cut be-yutiful an' I put tie on my hair an' give it a straight part an' got inter that clean shirt an' that swell suit o' clothes."

"He must 'a' bin doin' it for a bet."

"I went out an' found him a-waitin' fer me," resumed the other man. "He shook hands with me agin an' took my arm. 'Where are you goin' ter take me?' I asks him. 'What is the game, anyway?'"

"My friend," he says, "don't you know what day this is? It's a day when no hungry an' homeless-lookin' man kin pass my door if he'll come in an' make merry." An' the nex' thing he done was to take me inter a room, with a side-board an' give me a drink. It was de right stuff, too. 'Jest to give you an' appetite,' he says. Appetite! I hadn't et a square meal for three days. I was as hollow as I am now. Then he takes my arm agin an' we goes inter another room, where there was a lady an' a bunch o' kids. The lady seemed as if she had been lookin' anxious fer me ter come an' was afraid I had missed my train an' was givin' ter disappoint 'em. She treated me like an old friend. An' 'blimey one of the kids—a little girl with long yaller curls—come up an' crawled on my knee an' put her little arms around my neck an' hugged me tight."

"Soon after that they said dinner was ready. We went out an' sat down ter a table all covered with silver an' chiny an' feras. They brought on the biggest turkey I ever seen. There was roast beef an' trimmin's an' soup an' puddin' an' mince pie. I et an' we all laughed an' joked an' told stories an' had the best kind of a time. After dinner the kids sung their little songs an' I sung one, too, an' danced 'em my send dance an' I tickled 'em to death. An' then the lady sung an' played on the pianer an' her husband, my friend, he brought out cigars, an' we didn't have a time nobody ever did."

"An' that wum'n all there was to it, either. When I went to go, my friend he says to me, 'Billey, you go where they'll put you up right if you won't stay here, an' ter-morrow mornin' come around ter my office. I've got a steady job fer you.' And he slips me a five-spot. Then he shook hands with me agin an' I shook hands all round, an' kissed the kids—an' the littlest one she cried because I was goin'."

"So I took the steady job an'—an'—" The speaker's voice trailed off as he stared blankly at the frosted windows. "Billey," said the other, "you're a liar. You're a champion all-round liar. You've been strinin' and."

"I know it," acknowledged the man who had told the story, in an apathetic tone. "That's what I am—a liar. But I like ter lie ter myself sometimes. It beats the truth."—Chicago Daily News.

GOV. HANLY

May Surrender Fugitives Taylor and Finley.

Sunday's Cincinnati Enquirer contained the following special from Indianapolis:

"If I am convinced that Taylor and Finley will receive a fair trial in Kentucky and the requisition is drawn up in proper form, then I will honor a requisition for them."

This was Governor-elect Hanly's reply to a direct question by the Enquirer. When first asked what his attitude would be in case a requisition is presented, he said he would not make a statement till the matter is placed before him by Governor Beckham, but after brief reflection he made the replies stated above.

"If a requisition is presented, I shall consider the case very carefully and decide it fairly and honestly," he concluded.

Taylor and Finley are no longer in the public eye here in fact, their names are seldom mentioned, and it is believed by many party leaders now if a requisition should be honored it would not create much furor.

CHARLES WATKINS

Arrested For Selling His Father's Horse For $50.

Charles Watkins, col., a son of Richard Watkins, of Cadiz, arrived here Wednesday riding a sorrel mare that he sold for $50 to Ennis Morris, Marshal Davis, of Cadiz, soon afterwards telephoned that the horse was stolen. Watkins was arrested by Chief Shanklin and Officer Ricketts and $49.25 of the money recovered. He is 24 years old and the horse was the property of his father. Marshal Davis took Watkins back to Cadiz Thursday, where he will be tried. The young man said he was on his way to St. Louis and did not think his father would prosecute him.

GAME LAW

As it Applies to Squirrels and Rabbits.

There still seems to be considerable confusion concerning the interpretation of the game law, as it applies to squirrels and rabbits. According to the Kentucky statutes rabbits can be killed ten months in the year—from November 15 to September 15. The open seasons for squirrels extend from November 15 to February 1, and from June 15 to September 15.

Thus it will be seen that squirrels can be hunted only five and a half months in the year, while the open season for rabbits covers a period of ten months. Squirrels, when caught depredating on crops, can be killed at any time, however.

Quail shooting is lawful only six weeks in the year—from Nov. 15 to Jan. 1.

PRIZING TOBACCO.

Arrangements Made For Helping The Farmers.

The farmers will read with interest the announcement made by Mr. Abernathy in the advertising columns today. He has made arrangements with the Growers' Protective Association to prize tobacco for those who have no prizes. Once in hogheads, the tobacco can be stored and held, the banks having agreed to lend money to those who need it. The prices quoted by Mr. Abernathy are very reasonable.

There have been no breaks in the organization of growers, so far as heard. The buyers are contenting themselves with gathering up all of the little crops possible, outside the organization.

SOME SALES

Of the Weed Made This Week.

Receipts of tobacco for the first week of the new year were 10 hogheads. The old stock has nearly all been disposed of, only a few hogheads remaining. The sales amounted to 28 hogs. The weather for the past ten days has been unfavorable for handling the weed, hence but little has been doing in tobacco circles.

We REGRET that we were unable to wait upon the immense throng that attended our opening day. We prepared for a rush, but must admit that we were fairly overwhelmed. However, we've engaged more help and hope that they who were unable to get what they wanted will return again during the sale. Our duplicate stock in reserve will constantly replenish the bargains now offered, and other values as starting as any added day by day so that each day's sale will have its special feature. This sale will surpass all previous records for Hopkinsville and set a mark for future attempts. Come to-day; come every day.

Yours very gratefully, J. T. Wall & Co.
